

Is Magic Real?

We're to believe there is no such thing as real magic, but we're asked to believe there's a God of mystery with magical powers. I say this because we've never seen nor heard God, only made to believe that God exist. You can look around and see that a higher one created all that exist. All that we have today on earth could not have been created by itself, nor could any explosion could have created what we live on. The big-bang was God.

We can't talk to the dead, nor can we see the dead as ghosts, although there have been many claim to have seen ghosts. I do believe something supernatural exist in life and especially after death. Death is something out of the ordinary that can't really be explained other than, we decay and rot away back to earth, but not in a casket, that is sealed and covered with a concrete dome. I say that death is something of the supernatural where we'll all go when it's our time, and, we're to believe it's a good place, and not of evil. I want to believe this. We don't know for sure where we go after death. If we're to pay for our sins that we've committed while alive, than this is the time to be punished maybe. I really want to believe that after death, there are no worries, and a place of piece. This could also be a place very dark and a mysterious place, much unknown to humans, a place that you go first for some reason, and then you go to your final place for eternity. The truth is, we just aren't to know these things before death. Death is as much a mystery as God. The unknown to humans, is as scary as believing there's a devil that exist. To those that are afraid of death may be guilty of something, and worries about going to hell for eternity, that we've all been taught throughout our lives, if you sin, you'll go to hell. If this is true, that if you sin, you'll go to hell for eternity, why would we want to chance going to hell that may exist?

Copyright © 2014 John L. Brown

Feel free to copy and use on your website.

John L. Brown